

MATTHEW D. EYLES
Vice President, Public Affairs & Policy

As Vice President, Public Affairs & Policy, and a member of the company's senior management team, Matthew D. (Matt) Eyles leads Coventry's public policy, government affairs, and internal and external communications functions. He is a key advisor to the business on all matters related to health reform, including the impact of new legislation on Medicare and Medicaid programs, as well as corporate readiness for participation in health insurance exchanges.

Prior to joining Coventry in December 2009, Eyles was Vice President, Corporate Public Policy at Wyeth (now Pfizer, Inc.), a Fortune 150 global biopharmaceutical and health care products company. He was responsible for setting and driving the company's public policy initiatives, and he led the company's public policy office for all divisions and business units globally. As the company anticipated the launch of Medicare Part D in January 2006, Eyles was also head of Wyeth's Medicare Readiness Team, which developed and implemented commercial and policy strategies related to Medicare Part D.

Before his tenure at Wyeth, Eyles managed a broad portfolio of state and federal public policy issues at Eli Lilly & Company, including the impact of early legislative proposals to create a Medicare prescription benefit. He began his career on Capitol Hill at the Congressional Budget Office (CBO).

Eyles serves on the Board of Directors of NEHI, a national network for health innovation dedicated to improving the quality and lowering the cost of health care. He earned a Master of Sciences degree in public policy from the University of Rochester and a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science and history from The George Washington University.
