

Guy's Grocery Games Episode Descriptions

"Wild in the Aisles"

In their first challenge, the chefs make their best version of spaghetti and meatballs. However, they soon learn that the key ingredients are out of stock. The chefs must substitute and improvise in a mad dash grabbing alternatives from around the market. Then, in budget battle, the chefs use their supermarket savvy and couponing genius to make a family meal for four with just $6.35. For the final challenge, the two remaining chefs make their best dishes using only ingredients from the frozen food aisle. The winner gets the chance to go on the Super Shopping Spree worth up to $20,000.

JUDGES: Melissa d'Arabian, Lorena Garcia, and Troy Johnson

"Frozen Feats"

In the first challenge, the four chefs create an Asian-inspired dish using only five ingredients. Then, Guy hands the chefs an unusual grocery list with items that they must locate from around the store to create the perfect fun, family meal to earn them a place in the next challenge. The two remaining chefs race against the clock as the store is closing its shopping hours. With only two minutes to shop, they must make decisions as fast as they can. The competitor who makes the most delicious pasta dish advances to the Super Shopping Spree with the hopes of winning up to $20,000.

JUDGES: Melissa d'Arabian, Beau MacMillan, and Jet Tila

"The Ol' Switcheroo!"

In the first challenge, the chefs make a mad dash to the produce section to make a gourmet salad, but all the leafy greens are out of stock, so they have to substitute and improvise on the spot to create their dish. Then, coupons and quick thinking come in handy during a budget battle. In the final challenge, making a comfort food meal seems simple until the final two chefs must swap their bags of ingredients. The chef who can improvise and impress the judges earns the chance to go on the Super Shopping Spree.

JUDGES: Richard Blais, Troy Johnson, and Catherine McCord

"Surfs Up!"

In the first battle, the chefs must find a way to make amazing surf and turf dinners using only canned foods. Then in the second challenge, Guy tells the chefs to ditch their carts and gather as many ingredients as they can using only their hands to make a soup and sandwich combo. The final two chefs get Guy's grocery list of diverse ingredients and must make their best steakhouse dinner for the last challenge. The winner earns the chance to go on the Super Shopping Spree.

JUDGES: Melissa d'Arabian, Lorena Garcia, and Troy Johnson

"Feisty Fiesta"

It's a frozen food feud as the chefs race to aisle eight for frozen dishes to make a savory seafood meal. Then, three chefs stride on to the second challenge, where they get Guy's unusual grocery list and must incorporate all six mandatory ingredients. Will they be stumped, or can they make a delicious Mexican dish using soy sauce? The final two chefs race through the aisles without shopping carts in search of breakfast ingredients they can carry. The most impressive dish advances the chef to the Super Shopping Spree.

JUDGES: Lorena Garcia, Troy Johnson, and Jet Tila

"Five Star Frozen Feud!"

Guy challenges the chefs to make him a five-star dinner using only ingredients in the frozen food aisle. Then, the chefs must gather as many healthy items as they can without using their shopping carts to create a kid-friendly meal. The pressure is on as the final two chefs race through the store while the lights are off with just a few minutes to shop. The most delicious savory pie will bring one chef to the Super Shopping Spree worth up to $20,000.

JUDGES: Richard Blais, Melissa d'Arabian, and Beau MacMillan

“It's Egg-cellent!”

Guy hands the chefs his unusual grocery list, and they scramble to make their best egg dish. The second challenge has a hold-up at the cash register, as the chefs scratch their heads to figure out how to make a dinner for four using just $7.83. Then, it all comes down to improvising when Guy swaps the shopping bags of the final two chefs. With up to $20,000 on the line, which chef will make the best gourmet lunch?

JUDGES: Melissa d'Arabian, Troy Johnson, and Catherine McCord

“Cart Your Engines”

In the first round, the four chefs create international-themed dishes using just five ingredients or less. Then, the chefs are restricted to using only the items in aisle four – the cereal, nuts and candy aisle. In a final twist, the two remaining chefs must make steak and potatoes without key components on the shelves. Which chef has the skills and can handle the pressure and earn up to $20,000?

JUDGES: Beau MacMillan, Catherine McCord, and Marcela Valladolid

“Holly Jolly Meals”

For the first challenge, Guy gives the chefs a small budget to create tasty grilled cheese sandwiches for four. Then, he challenges the chefs to make unusual desserts from the ingredients in the meat, seafood and dairy aisle. In the spirit of the season, the final two chefs shop the aisles to make their best holiday dish with delicious sides, but Guy swaps their bag of ingredients when they return. Quick thinking, ingenuity, and serious skills in the kitchen will send one chef on the Super Shopping Spree with an extra holiday surprise!

JUDGES: Melissa d'Arabian, Richard Blais, and Troy Johnson

“Game Day Rush!”

The supermarket is closing while the chefs race through the aisles gathering as many ingredients as they can with just two minutes to shop for their game day feast. Then, the remaining chefs must make their best dish using only the produce and condiments aisle. In Guy's final challenge, the two chefs must use just five items to make an upscale chicken dinner. Only one will be resourceful and creative enough to wow the judges and earn up to $20,000 in the Super Shopping Spree.

JUDGES: Richard Blais, D.C. Crenshaw, and Catherine McCord

“Yes, Chefs Can!”

In Guy's first challenge, four chefs make an Italian feast using only canned foods. Then, it's closing time as the chefs race, shop and get all the fixings for the ultimate hot dog dish in a limited amount of time. The two chefs in the final game must come up with their best rice dish while incorporating mandatory items from Guy's wild grocery list, and the winner gets to go on a Super Shopping Spree.

“Cart Wars”

In Guy's first challenge, the chefs must find a way to make tacos without tortillas, taco seasoning or ground beef. Just three chefs make it to the second challenge where Guy challenges them to make him a sandwich using only frozen food ingredients. Then, with only five ingredients or less, the final two chefs must be resourceful as they make a super seafood dish, and the winner gets a shopping spree worth up to $20,000.
