

About Zosia Mamet

In film and television, Zosia Mamet is quickly establishing herself as one of the industry's most exciting new talents. In the spring of 2012, Mamet starred in the Emmy Award and Golden Globe Award winning HBO series "Girls," the series critically acclaimed for taking a comic look at the assorted humiliations and rare triumphs of a group of girls in their early 20s. In the role of 'Shoshanna,' she aspires to the "Sex and the City" lifestyle.

In addition to her work in film and television, Mamet is a devoted writer. "To share my heart, and soul and the thoughts in my head, to tell a story; is a terrifying and thrilling experience that I wouldn't trade for the world," says Mamet. "That's why I write."

Mamet will next star in the indie film "Shiva & May." Other upcoming projects include roles in "Outliving Emily," "Olympia Dukakis," and a USA drama series, "Dominion" with John Malkovich. Mamet is a paid spokesperson for Bayer.
