

BO BROWNSTEIN, FOUNDER

Entrepreneur Bo Brownstein has created successful businesses in financial services and media. In 2014, Brownstein founded Fantasy Sports Combine in order to educate, entertain and aggregate the fantasy sports community. Wynn Las Vegas and Encore will serve as host for this first ever event July 17-19, 2015. Fantasy Sports Combine will offer fantasy sports enthusiasts' game-changing strategies and insights on how to win both daily and annual leagues by merging elite fantasy experts from around the country alongside championship coaches, award winning front office personnel and world-class athletes, for the education and experience of a lifetime.

During his college years, Brownstein was recruited by Northwestern University to play for the Wildcats as an offensive lineman and was part of the 1996 Rose Bowl team. Afterwards, he transferred to the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA). At UCLA, Brownstein studied political science and after graduating, he took a job at a New York investment bank. In 2004, he received a master's in business from Columbia University and moved back to Colorado to form an investment advisory firm.

In addition, Brownstein has been an ardent supporter and volunteer for numerous charitable organizations focused on underprivileged children, where he has served as both a tutor and coach. In keeping with that passion, the 2015 Fantasy Sports Combine has designated After School All-Stars as its charitable partner.

Brownstein has a wife Lauren, two small children and resides in Denver, Colorado.
