LET'S BUILD A SUPER SCHOOL

XQ: The Super School Project is an open call to America's students, parents, educators, civic leaders, businesses, inventors, entrepreneurs, artists and designers to meet the challenge of preparing our students for the future by designing the next American high school.

Our public high schools were built for a different era—when we were preparing our workforce for factory life in an industrial economy. Today, we need new skills—and an agile and flexible intelligence for a rapidly changing future—yet, our high schools have not changed. They remain frozen in time.

That's why the XQ Institute is launching XQ: The Super School Project to design the next American high school. Our hope is that collaboration across communities and industries will spark the best new thinking to truly transform how we approach public education.

A DESIGN COMPETITION UNLIKE ANY OTHER

America is a country that has long thrived on ingenuity to solve the challenges of our times. XQ: The Super School Project will once again tap into that innovative spirit by uniting teams in cities and towns across the United States around one goal—to find and celebrate the models for high schools that will truly prepare all our students for today and tomorrow.

Teams will compete to design the best and most innovative new schools. The most promising ideas will be selected, and those teams will receive additional resources, access to unmatched talent and funding to realize their vision.

The winning designs will inspire new high school models for every student in America worthy of the future.
