

Using Light as Decoration for Your Living Room and Home Theatre

As technology evolves, interior décor also evolves to soothe the sensibilities of everyone from urbanites to suburban family units seeking a certain touch of luxury. While technology is seamlessly incorporated into interior design, one crucial component remains unchanged – the importance of light as decoration.

Light brings life and illumination to every room, but it can sometimes pose a problem when you're watching the big game, or settling in for a movie. Some may think they have to live with glare, or enclose themselves in dark basement dens to enjoy their technology, but modern window treatments can balance both beauty and functionality.

Optimal Systems for Light Management

Functional window fashions take advantage of light so rooms can be swathed in natural beauty, but also control it so darkness can be achieved when watching your favourite television show or movie with the family. Hunter Douglas, an innovation leader in shades and blinds, has created several lines of beautiful window treatments that marry beauty and functionality.

Ensuring Privacy Throughout the Day

Light is beautiful, but it should be let into the home in such a way that allows you to manage privacy. Hunter Douglas Luminette® Privacy Sheers have the look of beautiful sheer drapery panels, and the added bonus of vertical fabric vanes that rotate to provide unlimited light control and privacy options.

Creating Different Moods for Morning and Night

Modern window treatments utilize technology to adjust themselves automatically and create the perfect room ambiance for any time of day. PowerView® Motorization from Hunter Douglas allows homeowners to move window treatments to predetermined positions, and then control and schedule them with an intuitive PowerView App. For example, long-term exposure from direct sunlight can be damaging to your home's artwork. With predetermined positioning you can allow for the right amount of light to enter your home, while preserving your beautiful pieces of art.

Blackout Technology

True technophiles want window designs that support their viewing habits. Whether you're creating a theatre-like movie-watching experience or getting ready to watch the big game, Hunter Douglas' Duette® LightLock™ system ensures you never miss a moment. With innovative U-shaped side channels that feature a black, ridged interior surface you'll be able to achieve unparalleled darkness.

Creating a Theatre Experience at Home
